

Economics Reading List

There has been a lot of fantastic work done in the field of Economics in recent years. I've been asked many times for recommendations of books to read by students. The list below isn't comprehensive, but contains a number of titles that I have found to be both readable and educational. I would recommend any one of them to someone looking to learn more about Economics.

The Tipping Point – Malcolm Gladwell
Blink – Malcolm Gladwell
Outliers – Malcolm Gladwell
David & Goliath – Malcolm Gladwell
Talking to Strangers – Malcolm Gladwell
Good to Great – Jim Collins
Naked Economics: Undressing the Dismal Science – Charles Wheelan
Switch – Chip Heath & Dan Heath
Start with the Why – Simon Sinek
Leaders Eat Last – Simon Sinek
Infinite Game – Simon Sinek
Dark Money – Jane Meyer
The Fifth Risk: Undoing Democracy – Michael Lewis
Moneyball – Michael Lewis
Liars Poker – Michael Lewis
The Big Short – Michael Lewis
The Undercover Economist – Tim Harford
The Undercover Economist Strikes Back – Tim Harford
Disrupting Class – Clayton Christensen
The World is Flat – Thomas Friedman
Hot, Flat, & Crowded – Thomas Friedman
Thank you for Being Late – Thomas Friedman
Freakonomics – Stephen Levitt & Stephen Dubner
Super Freakonomics – Stephen Levitt & Stephen Dubner
24/7: Living It Up and Doubling Down in the New Las Vegas – Andres Martinez
Reefer Madness: Sex, Drugs, and Cheap Labor in the American Black Market –
Eric Schlosser
The Ascent of Money: A Financial History of the World – Niall Ferguson